

I am a professional truck driver. I use XM Radio every day for weather and traffic reports both local and nation wide. I guess if we cannot have local weather on XM Radio. Then will the next local weather stations to be excluded be NOAA? I suggest these commercial entities fight it out in the market place. Where the consumer decides. Not the government which some times shows signs of socialism in its zeal to protect the public. In this case seems to be trying to protect an old industry from a new technology for purely mercenary reasons because the old industry has paid to change the rules of the game and thus upset the market forces. Which if left alone the market will settle as it has in the case of subscription television services and broadcast television.
